Development Requirements and Stipend Information

UNM Online stipends are available for all courses that successfully complete a Foundational Course Design Review, including newly developed online courses and courses which have been previously offered online. To be eligible for a review stipend:

- Course must be developed in collaboration with the Center for Teaching & Learning. The IBOC must meet at least once with their assigned instructional designer to be eligible for a Foundational Course Design Review.
- Course must adhere to the UNM Online Excellence Framework: <https://ctl.unm.edu/onlineframework/>
- Course development must be based on the Foundational Course Design Elements and any applicable Special Considerations from the UNM Online Learning Excellence Framework.
- Courses must adhere to federal regulations on Regular and Substantive Interaction and Web Content Accessibility Level 2 Guidelines (WCAG). Regular and Substantive Interaction (RASI) training is accessed through Learning Central.
- Distribution of review stipends to instructors is at the discretion of both the college and the IBOC's department. Consult with your department regarding payment methods before requesting a Foundational Course Design Review as policies around stipend payouts vary among colleges/schools.
- The stipend is transferred to the IBOC's college/school upon successful completion of the Foundational Course Design Review and implementation of all required changes.
- Stipends will only be paid for reviews successfully completed within the semester the review was requested. Deadlines are provided in the Foundation Course Design Review page and in email communications.

Is there alternate funding for this course? For example, is this course part of an accelerated online program (AOP)?
